Attorneys for Mr. Loma-Torres

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

(HONORABLE IRMA E. GONZALEZ)

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff, v. MANUEL LOMA-TORRES, Defendant.	CASE NO. 08CR0538-IEG DATE: April 14, 2008 TIME: 2:00 p.m. STATEMENT OF FACTS AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTIONS

I.

BACKGROUND[1]

On January 27, 2008, Mr. Loma-Torres was arrested. On February 27, 2008, the government filed a one-count indictment charging a violation of 8 U.S.C. §§ 1326(a) and (b). The indictment was returned by the January 2007 grand jury.

These motions follow.

MOTIONS TO DISMISS THE INDICTMENT

A. Motion to Dismiss the Indictment Because it Fails to Allege All Elements of the Charged Offense

The indictment must be dismissed because the government has failed to properly allege all elements

[1] The following statement of facts and any facts further cited in this motion are based on discovery provided by the government. Mr. Loma-Torres does not admit the truth or accuracy of these facts, and reserves the right to challenge the truth and accuracy of these facts in any subsequent pleadings or during any further proceedings.

of the offense. "Two corollary purposes of an indictment are to ensure that the defendant is being prosecuted on the basis of facts presented to the grand jury and to allow the court to determine the sufficiency of the indictment." United States v. Lane, 765 F.2d 1376, 1380 (9th Cir. 1985). "To serve each of these functions, the indictment must allege the elements of the offense charged and the facts which inform the defendant of the specific offense with which he is charged." United States v. Pernillo-Fuentes, 252 F.3d 1030, 1032 (9th Cir. 2001) (quoting Lane, 765 F.2d at 1380). Accordingly, "[a]n indictment's failure to recite an essential element of the charged offense is not a minor or technical flaw . . . but a fatal flaw." United States v. Du Bo, 186 F.3d 1177, 1179 (9th Cir. 1999).

Here, the indictment must be dismissed because it fails to allege both the dates of a previous felony conviction and of a previous removal from the United States subsequent to that conviction. The indictment charges a violation of 8 U.S.C. §§ 1326(a) and (b). The statutory maximum sentence for violation of 8 U.S.C. § 1326(a) is two years of imprisonment. Pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1326(b), however, a higher statutory maximum may apply if the alien was removed subsequent to certain predicate crimes. In United States v. Salazar-Lopez, 506 F.3d 748, 751-52 (9th Cir. 2007), the Ninth Circuit held that an allegation in the indictment that the defendant "had been removed on a specific, post-conviction date" is "required" in order to trigger the enhanced penalties under 8 U.S.C. § 1326(b). Here, although the indictment alleges a violation of 8 U.S.C. § 1326(b), it fails to allege either a specific removal date or the temporal relationship between that removal and a prior conviction. Rather, the indictment merely alleges that Mr. Loma-Torres was removed from the United States subsequent to one unassociated date, June 6, 2006. Because the indictment fails to allege all of the necessary elements of the charged offense, § 1326(b), it must be dismissed.

Moreover, the indictment fails to allege the following elements necessary to convict Mr. Loma-Torres of the offense: that Mr. Loma-Torres knew he was in the United States, he failed to undergo inspection and admission by an immigration officer at the nearest inspection point, and that he voluntarily entered the United States. As a consequence, it must be dismissed. See e.g., Nyrienda v. I.N.S., 279 F.3d 620 (8th Cir. 2002) (setting forth the components of an entry under the immigration law); see also United States v. Pernillo-Fuentes, 252 F.3d 1030 (9th Cir. 2001); United States v. Du Bo, 186 F.3d 1177, 1179 (9th Cir. 1999).[2]

[2] These issues were decided against Mr. Loma-Torres in United States v. Rivera-Sillas, 376 F.3d 887 (9th Cir. 2004). However, these issues remain open in the Supreme Court. To reserve

B. Motion to Dismiss The Indictment Because it Violates Mr. Loma-Torres's Right to Presentment.

Mr. Loma-Torres has a Fifth Amendment right to have a grand jury pass upon those facts necessary to convict him at trial. In the indictment, the government included the language: "It is further alleged that defendant MANUEL LOMA-TORRES (T/N), aka Juan Diego Garcia-Lopez, was removed from the United States subsequent to June 6, 2006."[3] The indictment in this case violates Mr. Loma-Torres's right to presentment in two ways. First, the language added by the government does not ensure that the grand jury actually found probable cause that Mr. Loma-Torres was deported after June 6, 2006, as opposed to simply being physically removed from the United States. Second, that the grand jury found probable cause to believe that Mr. Loma-Torres was removed "subsequent to June 6, 2006" does not address the possibility that the government may at trial rely on a deportation that was never presented to, or considered by, the grand jury.

The Fifth Amendment provides that "[n]o person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury." U.S. Const. Amend. V. The Sixth Amendment provides that "[i]n all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right . . . to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation . . .." U.S. Const. Amend. VI. Thus, a defendant has a constitutional right to have the charges against him presented to a grand jury and to be informed of the grand jury's findings via indictment. See Russell v. United States, 369 U.S. 749, 763 (1962) (An indictment must "contain[] the elements of the offense intended to be charged, and sufficiently apprise[] the defendant of what he must be prepared to meet.").

To be sufficient, an indictment must allege every element of the charged offense. See United States v. Morrison, 536 F.2d 286, 287 (9th Cir. 1976) (citing United States v. Debrow, 346 U.S. 374 (1953)). Indeed, in order to be sufficient, an indictment must include implied elements not present in the statutory these issues for further review, Mr. Loma-Torres incorporates the arguments made by the defendant in Rivera-Sillas. If the Court wants full briefing on these issues, Mr. Loma-Torres will provide it.

[3] Presumably, the government added this language in an attempt to comply with the Ninth Circuit's decision in United States v. Covian-Sandoval, 462 F.3d 1090 (9th Cir. 2006). In Covian-Sandoval, the Ninth Circuit held that it is an Apprendi violation for a court to increase a person's statutory maximum under 8 U.S.C. § 1326(b) via a court-finding that a person had been removed from the United States following a conviction. This language, however, does not cure the problems with this indictment. Should sentencing become necessary, Mr. Loma-Torres will file further briefing on this issue.

language. See Du Bo, 186 F.3d at 1179. "If an element is necessary to convict, it is also necessary to indict, because elements of a crime do not change as criminal proceedings progress." United States v. Hill, 279 F.3d 731, 741 (9th Cir. 2002). An indictment's failure to "recite an essential element of the charged offense is not a minor or technical flaw . . . but a fatal flaw requiring dismissal of the indictment." Du Bo, 186 F.3d at 1179.

In the indictment, the government here has added the language: "It is further alleged that defendant MANUEL Loma-Torres (T/N), aka Juna Diego Garcia-Lopez, was removed from the United States subsequent to June 6, 2006." There is no indication from this allegation that the grand jury was charged with the legal meaning of the word "removal" applicable in this context, as opposed to being simply removed from the United States in a colloquial sense. It is clear from Covian-Sandoval that in order to trigger the enhanced statutory maximum contained in section 1326(b), the government must prove that a person was removed—as that term is used in the immigration context—after having suffered a conviction. 462 F.3d at 1097-1098 (noting as part of its analysis that immigration proceedings have fewer procedural protections that criminal proceedings). A deportation has the following elements: "(1) that a deportation proceeding occurred as to [the] defendant and as a result, [(2)] a warrant of deportation was issued and [(3)] executed by the removal of the defendant from the United States." See United States v. Castillo-Basa, 483 F.3d 890 (9th Cir. 2007) (citing, without contesting, the elements of a deportation provided by the district court.) As this is the type of removal the government must prove before a petit jury, it is necessary that the government allege such a removal before the grand jury. As returned, however, there is no assurance from the face of the indictment that the grand jury in this case was charged with the type of removal necessary to increase a person's statutory maximum under section 1326(b).

As such, there is no fair assurance that the grand jury will have passed upon those facts necessary to convict Mr. Loma-Torres. Additionally, as charged, there is no fair assurance that the indictment will contain those allegations the government will attempt to prove at trial. If the government alleged before the grand jury that Mr. Loma-Torres was removed (in a colloquial sense), but offers proof at trial that Mr. Loma-Torres was removed (in an immigration sense), there will be a constructive amendment of the indictment at trial. See Stirone v. United States, 361 U.S. 212, 217-19 (1960). Either scenario represents a violation of Mr. Loma-Torres's right to presentment. Stirone, 361 U.S. at 218-19.

A second problem with the indictment is that there is no indication which (if any) deportation the government presented to the grand jury. In most cases, the government will have a choice of deportations to present to the grand jury to support an allegation that a person had been deported after a specific date. According to information provided by the government, although not conceded by the defendant, Mr. Loma-Torres has been subjected to removal proceedings on more than one occasion. This renders it a very real possibility that the government alleged one deportation to the grand jury to sustain its allegation that Mr. Loma-Torres was removed from the United States, but will attempt to prove at trial a wholly different deportation to sustain its trial proof. If this were to turn out to be the case, Mr. Loma-Torres's right to have the grand jury pass on all facts necessary to convict him would be violated. See Du Bo, 186 F.3d 1179.

C. Motion to Dismiss the Indictment Due to Misinstruction of the Grand Jury.

The indictment in the instant case was returned by the January 2007 grand jury. That grand jury was instructed on January 11, 2007. The instructions to the impaneled grand jury deviate from the instructions at issue in the major Ninth Circuit cases challenging a form grand jury instruction previously given in this district in several ways.[4] First, the grand jury was improperly instructed that their singular duty is to determine whether or not probable cause exists and that they have no right to decline to indict when the probable cause standard is satisfied. Second, the grand jury was improperly instructed of a non-existent prosecutorial duty to present exculpatory evidence. These instructions were compounded by the erroneous instructions and comments to prospective grand jurors during voir dire of the grand jury panel, which immediately preceded the instructions. Therefore, the indictment should be dismissed.

D. Motion to Dismiss the Indictment Because the Charging Statute is Unconstitutional

The Supreme Court's decision in Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), renders 8 U.S.C. § 1326 unconstitutional. Although this argument is foreclosed by current Ninth Circuit precedent, see United States v. Covian-Sandoval, 462 F.2d 1090, 1096-97 (9th Cir. 2006), it is presented for purposes of further appellate review.

[4] See, e.g., United States v. Cortez-Rivera, 454 F.3d 1038 (9th Cir. 2006); United States v. Navarro-Vargas, 408 F.3d 1184 (9th Cir.) (en banc), cert. denied, 126 S. Ct. 736 (2005) (Navarro-Vargas II); United States v. Navarro-Vargas, 367 F.3d 896 (9th Cir. 2004)(Navarro-Vargas I); United States v. Marcucci, 299 F.3d 1156 (9th Cir. 2002) (per curiam). If the Court or the government request further briefing on this issue, or the transcript from the grand jury proceedings, then it will be provided forthwith.

In Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224 (1998), the Supreme Court held that in a § 1326 prosecution, the fact of a prior conviction need not be alleged in the indictment to increase a defendant's maximum sentence. Subsequently, however, in Apprendi, the Supreme Court held that any fact that increases the statutory maximum sentence must be pled in the indictment, submitted to a jury, and proved beyond a reasonable doubt. See 530 U.S. at 476. Section 1326 sets forth a scheme in which certain facts – prior convictions – may drastically increase the applicable statutory maximum without being set forth in the indictment or proven at trial. According to the explicit mandate of Apprendi, this violates the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. To the extent that Almendarez-Torres holds that section 1326(b) was intended by Congress to create sentencing enhancements for a judge to determine rather than elements of separate offenses, section 1326 is unconstitutional under Apprendi.

III.

MOTION TO STRIKE SURPLUSAGE FROM THE INDICTMENT

The above arguments to dismiss the indictment based on the government's failure to comply with Mr. Loma-Torres's Fifth and Sixth Amendment rights is premised on Covian-Sandoval having read into section 1326 an additional element—a deportation that occurred at a particular time—that the government must plead to the grand jury and prove to a jury. To the extent the government argues that Covian-Sandoval did not create an additional element, the indictment contains surplusage. In other words, if the government argues that the timing of a person's deportation is not a element of section 1326, but rather a sentencing factor under subsection (b) of section 1326, the indictment alleges a fact—the timing of a person's deportation—the Supreme Court has clearly held to be decided by a judge.

The Ninth Circuit has "repeatedly held that language [in an indictment] that describes elements beyond what is required under statute is surplusage and need not be proved at trial." Bargas v. Burns, 179 F.3d 1207, 1216 n. 6 (9th Cir. 1999). Surplusage in an indictment is subject to being struck at the request of the defendant. United States v. Fernandez, 388 F.3d 1199, 1220-21 (9th Cir. 2004). In this case, if the government argues that the date of a person's deportation is not a required element of section 1326, the indictment contains language beyond that which is necessary to convict Mr. Loma-Torres of violating section 1326. If the date of a person's deportation is not an element of section 1326, then the language in the indictment—"It is further alleged that defendant MANUEL LOMA-TORRES (T/N), aka Juan Diego Garcia-Lopez, was removed from the United States subsequent to June 6, 2006"— is surplusage. So too is the government's allegation in the indictment that Mr. Loma-Torres violated section 1326, subsection (b).

At one time, the Ninth Circuit considered subsection (b) of section 1326 to be a separate offense from subsection (a). See United States v. Corona-Sanchez, 291 F.3d 1201, 1203 (9th Cir. 2002) (en banc). This changed, however, following the Supreme Court's decision in Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224 (1998). See Corona-Sanchez, 291 F.3d at 1203. In Almendarez-Torres, the Supreme Court decided that subsection (b) of section 1326 described a sentencing provision, to be determined by a judge, rather than a substantive offense. See id. Following Almendarez-Torres, the Ninth Circuit rethought the way in which subsection (b) should be viewed, to the extent that indictments and judgements that reflect a violation of both subsection (a) and subsection (b) of section 1326 should have the reference to subsection (b) struck to "unambiguously reflect that the defendant was convicted of only one punishable offense pursuant . . .." Id.

Although an allegation of a particular date of deportation would likely be an appropriate response on the government's part to the holding of Covian-Sandoval, the government here has chosen to include in the indictment an allegation that goes solely towards an allegation under subsection (b) of section 1326. Indeed, the government has chosen to actually allege a violation of subsection (b) of section 1326 in the indictment. As Almendarez-Torres makes clear, however, Congress clearly intended findings under subsection (b) of section 1326 to be made by a judge, rather than a jury. Almendarez-Torres, 523 U.S. at 235 ("we believe that Congress intended to set forth a sentencing factor in subsection (b)(2) and not a separate criminal offense).

Although the Ninth Circuit is free to overrule its own precedent regarding whether Congress intended a statutory provision to be decided by a judge, rather than a jury, see, e.g., United States v. Buckland, 289 F.3d 558, 564-68 (9th Cir. 2002) (en banc) (discussing enhanced penalties under 21 U.S.C. § 841), it has not seen fit to overrule the Supreme Court's decision in Almendarez-Torres. See, e.g., United States v. Weiland, 420 F.3d 1062, 1079 n. 16 (9th Cir. 2005). For these reasons, to the degree the government argues that Covian-Sandoval did not create an additional element of section 1326, the government has pled in the indictment an allegation that Congress intended to be decided by judge, rather than a jury.[5] Therefore, pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7(d), Mr. Loma-Torres moves to strike this surplusage from the indictment.

IV.

MOTION TO PRODUCE GRAND JURY TRANSCRIPTS

Mr. Loma-Torres hereby moves this Court to compel the government to produce all grand jury transcripts in this case. See U.S. CONST. AMENDS V & VI[6]. Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 6(e)(3)(E)(ii) allows disclosure "at the request of a defendant who shows that a ground may exist to dismiss the indictment because of a matter that occurred before the grand jury." Given the arguments raised above, it is clear that "a ground may exist to dismiss the indictment because of a matter that occurred before the grand jury." Fed. R. Crim. P 6(e)(3)(E)(ii). Mr. Loma-Torres requests the Court "authorize disclosure" of the grand jury transcript to allow him to adequately prepare for trial and to perfect his appellate record. See id.

[5] The holdings in Covian-Sandoval and Almendarez-Torres also render subsection (b) of section 1326 unconstitutional. In Covian-Sandoval, the Ninth Circuit held that a jury must determine the timing of a person's deportation to trigger subsection (b)'s enhanced statutory maximum. Covian-Sandoval, 462 F.3d 1097-1098. In Almendarez-Torres, however, the Supreme Court held that Congress intended subsection (b) to be a sentencing provision to be determined by a judge. Almendarez-Torres, 523 U.S. at 235. It is thus clear that subsection (b), as written and construed by the Supreme Court, violates Apprendi.

[6] The Supreme Court has found that "[t]he grand jury is an integral part of our constitutional heritage which was brought to this country with the common law. The Framers, most of them trained in the English law and traditions, accepted the grand jury as a basic guarantee of individual liberty . . . the grand jury continues to function as a barrier to reckless or unfounded charges. 'Its adoption in our Constitution as the sole method for preferring charges in serious criminal cases shows the high place it held as an instrument of justice.' Costello v. United States, 350 U.S. 359, 362 (1956). Its historic office has been to provide a shield against arbitrary or oppressive action, by insuring that serious criminal accusations will be brought only upon the considered judgment of a representative body of citizens acting under oath and under judicial instruction and guidance. " United States v. Manduano, 425 U.S. 564, 571 (1976). In order to ensure that the criminally accused are safeguarded from reckless and unfounded charges, judges must take their duty to provide guidance seriously and not simply pay lip service to the assurances of the government. It is curious why the government, in this district in particular, fights so hard to keep grand jury proceedings sealed. Interestingly, in many cases, the "witness" who "testifies" before the grand jury is a border patrol agent who neither participated in the arrest or the investigation. He is only called to read a report which has been prepared by others. Such a practice does not allow for the considered judgment of grand jurors. Thus, the release of transcripts is appropriate.

V.

MOTION TO SUPPRESS STATEMENTS

Mr. Loma-Torres moves to suppress his statements on the grounds of a Miranda violation and involuntariness.

A. The Government Must Demonstrate Compliance with Miranda.

The prosecution may not use statements, whether exculpatory or inculpatory, stemming from a custodial interrogation of the defendant unless it demonstrates the use of procedural safeguards effective to secure the privilege against self-incrimination. Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 444 (1966); see also Berkemer v. McCarty, 468 U.S. 420, 428 (1984) (restating Miranda principles). "The ruling in Miranda prohibits 'custodial interrogation' unless the government first gives warnings to the [subject of the interrogation]." United States v. Gonzalez-Sandoval, 894 F.2d 1043, 1046 (9th Cir. 1990). Once a person is in custody, Miranda warnings must be given prior to any interrogation. See United States v. Estrada-Lucas, 651 F.2d 1261, 1265 (9th Cir. 1980). Those warnings must advise the defendant of each of his "critical" rights. United States v. Bland, 908 F.2d 471, 474 (9th Cir. 1990). If a defendant indicates that he wishes to remain silent or requests counsel, the interrogation must cease. Miranda, 384 U.S. at 474; see also Edwards v. Arizona, 451 U.S. 477, 484 (1981).

To the extent that the government relies on a Miranda waiver, it must establish that Mr. Loma-Torres' waiver of his Miranda rights was voluntary, knowing, and intelligent. See Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218 (1973). When interrogation continues without the presence of an attorney, and a statement results, the government has a heavy burden to demonstrate that the defendant has intelligently and voluntarily waived his privilege against self-incrimination. Miranda, 384 U.S. at 475. The court must indulge every reasonable presumption against waiver of fundamental constitutional rights, so the burden on the government is great. United States v. Heldt, 745 F.2d 1275, 1277 (9th Cir. 1984).

In determining whether a waiver is voluntary, knowing, and intelligent, the court looks to the totality of the circumstances surrounding the case. Edwards v. Arizona, 451 U.S. 477 (1981); United States v. Garibay, 143 F.3d 534 (9th Cir. 1998). The Ninth Circuit has held that determination of the validity of a Miranda waiver requires a two prong analysis: the waiver must be both (1) voluntary and (2) knowing and intelligent. Derrick v. Peterson, 924 F. 2d 813 (9th Cir. 1990). The second prong requires an inquiry into whether "the waiver [was] made with a full awareness both of the nature of the right being abandoned and the consequences of the decision to abandon it." Id. at 820-821 (quoting Colorado v. Spring, 479 U.S. 564, 573 (1987)). Not only must the waiver be uncoerced, then, it must also involve a "requisite level of comprehension" before a court may conclude that Miranda rights have been legitimately waived. Id. (quoting Colorado v. Spring, 479 U.S. at 573). Unless and until Miranda warnings and a knowing and intelligent waiver are demonstrated by the prosecution, no evidence obtained as a result of the interrogation can be used against the defendant. Miranda, 384 U.S. at 479. The government in this case must prove that Mr. Loma-Torres waived his rights intelligently and voluntarily. Mr. Loma-Torres disputes any allegation any waiver was knowing, intelligent, and voluntarily.

To the extent that Mr. Loma-Torres made statements prior to any Miranda warning, those statements must be suppressed as well. Discovery produced by the government indicates that a border patrol agent questioned Mr. Loma-Torres regarding his immigration status while Mr. Loma-Torres was being held in police custody, but prior to any advisement of his rights. Such questioning clearly falls under the rubric of custodial interrogation. Furthermore, because of the close relationship between civil and criminal immigration investigations, "[c]ivil as well as criminal interrogation of in-custody defendants by INS [agents] should generally be accompanied by the Miranda warnings." United States v. Mata-Abundiz, 717 F.2d 1277, 1279 (9th Cir. 1983).

In United States v. Gonzalez-Sandoval, 894 F.2d 1043 (9th Cir. 1990), the defendant appeared at a local police station to provide his state parole officer with a urine sample. Id. at 1046. A second parole officer accused Mr. Gonzalez-Sandoval of being a deported alien and called the Border Patrol. Id. The Border Patrol came to the station, and without warning him pursuant to Miranda, asked Mr. Gonzalez-Sandoval where he was born and whether he possessed documents to verify the legality of his presence in the United States. Id. The Border Patrol agents then took Mr. Gonzalez-Sandoval to the Calexico Border Patrol Station. Failing to administer the Miranda warnings a second time, the agents questioned Mr. Gonzalez-Sandoval about any alias he possessed. Id. The agents ran an INS record check against Mr. Gonzalez-Sandoval's name and alias, and found Mr. Gonzalez-Sandoval's prior immigration record. Id. The Ninth Circuit found that the district court erred in failing to suppress the unwarned, prompted statements by Mr. Gonzalez-Sandoval about his name and alias. Id. at 1047.

In United States v. Mata-Abundiz, an INS agent visited the defendant in a state jail to obtain biographical information to determine the defendant's citizenship status. 717 F.2d at 1278. The agent knew about the state charges against Mr. Mata-Abundiz, and did not warn him pursuant to Miranda prior to obtaining the biographical data. Id. Afterwards, the agent made further inquiries at his office and within three hours returned to the jail to charge Mr. Mata-Abundiz with a federal immigration offense. Id. Despite the fact that the agent characterized his interrogation as pursuant to a civil investigation, the court held that the agent should have warned Mr. Mata-Abundiz as required by Miranda because the agent knew his interrogation could lead to federal charges against the defendant. Id. at 1278-1279.

Here, it is obvious that the information the agent elicited from Mr. Loma-Torres regarding his citizenship and application for permission to enter was "reasonably likely to inculpate" him. The questions served no purpose other than inculpation. They are in fact two of the four elements that they government must prove to obtain a conviction for a violation of 8 U.S.C. § 1326. Moreover, it appears from discovery that Mr. Loma-Torres was not read his Miranda rights at that point, nor advised that his answers to the agent's questions could result in federal charges against him. Therefore, the statements must be suppressed.

B. The Government Must Show That Mr. Loma-Torres's Statements Were Voluntary.

Even when the procedural safeguards of Miranda have been satisfied, a defendant in a criminal case is deprived of due process of law if his conviction is founded upon an involuntary confession. Arizona v. Fulminante, 499 U.S. 279 (1991); Jackson v. Denno, 378 U.S. 368, 387 (1964). The government bears the burden of proving that a confession is voluntary by a preponderance of the evidence. Lego v. Twomey, 404 U.S. 477, 483 (1972).

In order to be voluntary, a statement must be the product of a rational intellect and free will. Blackburn v. Alabama, 361 U.S. 199, 208 (1960). In determining whether a defendant's will was overborne in a particular case, the totality of the circumstances must be considered. Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218, 226 (1973). A confession is deemed involuntary if coerced by physical intimidation or psychological pressure. Townsend v. Sain, 372 U.S. 293, 307 (1963). "The test is whether the confession was 'extracted by any sort of threats or violence, [or] obtained by any direct or implied promises, however slight, [or] by the exertion of any improper influence.'" Hutto v. Ross, 429 U.S. 28, 30 (1976) (quoting Bram v. United States, 168 U.S. 532, 542-43 (1897)). Accord United States v. Tingle, 658 F.2d 1332, 1335 (9th Cir. 1981). The government bears a heavy burden in demonstrating that a confession is voluntary and the finding of voluntariness "'must appear from the record with unmistakable clarity.'" United States v. Davison, 768 F.2d 1266, 1270 (11th Cir. 1985). Here, such a finding cannot be made.

C. This Court Should Conduct An Evidentiary Hearing.

This Court should conduct an evidentiary hearing to determine whether Mr. Loma-Torres's statements should be admitted into evidence. Under 18 U.S.C. § 3501(a), this Court is required to determine, outside the presence of the jury, whether any statements made by Mr. Gonzalez-Sanchez are voluntary. In addition, § 3501(b) requires this Court to consider various enumerated factors, including whether Mr. Gonzalez-Sanchez understood the nature of the charges against him and understood his rights. Without evidence, this Court cannot adequately consider these statutorily mandated factors.

Moreover, section 3501(a) requires this Court to make a factual determination. Where a factual determination is required, courts are obligated to make factual findings by Fed. R. Crim. P. 12. See United States v. Prieto-Villa, 910 F.2d 601, 606-610 (9th Cir. 1990). Because "'suppression hearings are often as important as the trial itself,'" id. at 610 (quoting Waller v. Georgia, 467 U.S. 39, 46 (1984)), these findings should be supported by evidence, not merely an unsubstantiated recitation of purported evidence in a prosecutor's responsive pleading.

VI.

MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY/PRESERVE EVIDENCE

Mr. Loma-Torres moves for the production of the following discovery. This request is not limited to those items that the prosecutor knows of, but rather includes all discovery listed below that is in the custody, control, care, or knowledge of any "closely related investigative [or other] agencies." See United States v. Bryan, 868 F.2d 1032 (9th Cir. 1989).

(1) The Defendant's Statements. The government must disclose to the defendant all copies of any written or recorded statements made by the defendant; the substance of any statements made by the defendant which the government intends to offer in evidence at trial -- either in its case-in-chief or in rebuttal; see id., any response by the defendant to interrogation; the substance of any oral statements which the government intends to introduce at trial and any written summaries of the defendant's oral statements contained in the handwritten notes of the government agent; any response to any Miranda warnings which may have been given to the defendant; as well as any other statements by the defendant. Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(A)[7]. The Advisory Committee Notes and the 1991 Amendments to Rule 16 make clear that the Government must reveal all the defendant's statements, whether oral or written, regardless of whether the government intends to make any use of those statements. Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 16 is designed "to protect the defendant's rights to a fair trial." United States v. Rodriguez, 799 F.2d 649 (11th Cir. 1986); see also United States v. Noe, 821 F.2d 604, 607 (11th Cir. 1987) (reversing conviction for failure to provide statements offered in rebuttal -- government's failure to disclose statements made by the defendant is a serious detriment to preparing trial and defending against criminal charges).

(2) Arrest Reports and Notes. The defendant also specifically requests that the government turn over all arrest reports, notes and TECS records not already produced that relate to the circumstances surrounding his arrest or any questioning. This request includes, but is not limited to, any rough notes, records, reports, transcripts, referral slips, or other documents in which statements of the defendant or any other discoverable material is contained. Such material is discoverable under Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(A) and Brady v. Maryland. The government must produce arrest reports, investigators' notes, memos from arresting officers, sworn statements, and prosecution reports pertaining to the defendant. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(B) and (C), 26.2 and 12(I); United States v. Harris, 543 F.2d 1247, 1253 (9th Cir. 1976) (original notes with suspect or witness must be preserved); see also United States v. Anderson, 813 F.2d 1450, 1458 (9th Cir. 1987) (reaffirming Harris' holding).

(3) Brady Material. The defendant requests all documents, statements, agents' reports, and tangible evidence favorable to the defendant on the issue of guilt and/or which affects the credibility of the government's case. Kyles v. Whitley, 514 U.S. 419 (1995). Under Brady, Kyles and their progeny, impeachment, as well as exculpatory evidence, falls within the definition of evidence favorable to the accused. See also United States v. Bagley, 473 U.S. 667 (1985); United States v. Agurs, 427 U.S. 97 (1976). This includes information obtained from other investigations which exculpates Mr. Loma-Torres.

(4) Any Information That May Result in a Lower Sentence Under The Guidelines. The government must also produce this information under Brady v. Maryland. This request includes any cooperation or attempted cooperation by the defendant, as well as any information, including that obtained from other investigations or debriefings, that could affect any base offense level or specific offense characteristic under Chapter Two of the Guidelines. The defendant also requests any information relevant to a Chapter Three adjustment, a determination of the defendant's criminal history, and information relevant to any other application of the Guidelines.

(5) The Defendant's Prior Record. The defendant requests disclosure of his prior record. Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(B).

(6) Any Proposed 404(b) Evidence. The government must produce evidence of prior similar acts under Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(C) and Fed. R. Evid. 404(b) and 609. In addition, "upon request of the accused, the prosecution . . . shall provide reasonable notice in advance of trial . . . of the general nature" of any evidence the government proposes to introduce under Fed. R. Evid. 404(b) at trial and the purpose for which introduction is sought. This applies not only to evidence which the government may seek to introduce in its case-in-chief, but also to evidence which the government may use as rebuttal. See United States v. Vega, 188 F.3d 1150 (9th Cir. 1999). The defendant is entitled to "reasonable notice" so as to "reduce surprise," preclude "trial by ambush" and prevent the "possibility of prejudice." Id.; United States v. Perez-Tosta, 36 F.3d 1552, 1560-61 (11th Cir. 1994). Mr. Loma-Torres requests such reasonable notice at least two weeks before trial so as to adequately investigate and prepare for trial.

(7) Evidence Seized. The defendant requests production of evidence seized as a result of any search, either warrantless or with a warrant. Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(C).

(8) Request for Preservation of Evidence. The defendant specifically requests the preservation of any and all physical evidence that may be destroyed, lost, or otherwise put out of the possession, custody, or care of the government and which relates to the arrest or the events leading to the arrest in this case. This request includes, but is not limited to, the results of any fingerprint analysis, the defendant's personal effects, and any evidence seized from the defendant or any third party in relation to this case.

(9) Henthorn Material. Mr. Loma-Torres requests that the Assistant United States Attorney assigned to this case oversee a review of all personnel files of each agent involved in the present case for impeachment material. Kyles, 514 U.S. at 419; United States v. Henthorn, 931 F.2d 29 (9th Cir. 1991); United States v. Lacy, 896 F. Supp. 982 (N.D. Ca. 1995). At a minimum, the prosecutor has the obligation to inquire of his agents in order to ascertain whether or not evidence relevant to veracity or other impeachment exists.

(10) Tangible Objects. The defendant requests the opportunity to inspect and copy, as well as test, if necessary, all other documents and tangible objects, including photographs, books, papers, documents, fingerprint analyses, vehicles, or copies of portions thereof, which are material to the defense or intended for use in the government's case-in-chief or were obtained from or belong to the defendant. Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(C). Specifically, to the extent they were not already produced, the defendant requests copies of all photographs in the government's possession, including, but not limited to, the defendant and any other photos taken in connection with this case.

(11) Expert Witnesses. The defendant requests the name, qualifications, and a written summary of the testimony of any person that the government intends to call as an expert witness during its case in chief. Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(E). The defense requests that notice of expert testimony be provided at a minimum of two weeks prior to trial so that the defense can properly prepare to address and respond to this testimony, including obtaining its own expert and/or investigating the opinions and credentials of the government's expert. The defense also requests a hearing in advance of trial to determine the admissibility of qualifications of any expert. See Kumho v. Carmichael Tire Co. 119 S. Ct. 1167, 1176 (1999) (trial judge is "gatekeeper" and must determine reliability and relevancy of expert testimony and such determinations may require "special briefing or other proceedings . . ..").

(12) Evidence of Bias or Motive to Lie. The defendant requests any evidence that any prospective government witness is biased or prejudiced against the defendant, or has a motive to falsify or distort his or her testimony.

(13) Impeachment Evidence. The defendant requests any evidence that any prospective government witness has engaged in any criminal act whether or not resulting in a conviction and whether any witness has made a statement favorable to the defendant. See Fed. R. Evid. 608, 609 and 613; Brady v. Maryland.

(14) Evidence of Criminal Investigation of Any Government Witness. The defendant requests any evidence that any prospective witness is under investigation by federal, state or local authorities for any criminal conduct.

(15) Evidence Affecting Perception, Recollection, Ability to Communicate, or Truth Telling. The defense requests any evidence, including any medical or psychiatric report or evaluation, that tends to show that any prospective witness' ability to perceive, remember, communicate, or tell the truth is impaired, and any evidence that a witness has ever used narcotics or other controlled substance, or has ever been an alcoholic.

(16) Jencks Act Material. The defendant requests production in advance of trial of all material, including any tapes, which the government must produce pursuant to the Jencks Act, 18 U.S.C. § 3500; Fed. R. Crim. P. 26.2. Advance production will avoid the possibility of delay at the request of the defendant to investigate the Jencks material. A verbal acknowledgment that "rough" notes constitute an accurate account of the witness' interview is sufficient for the report or notes to qualify as a statement under section 3500(e)(1). Campbell v. United States, 373 U.S. 487, 490-92 (1963); see also United States v. Boshell, 952 F.2d 1101 (9th Cir. 1991) (holding that, where an agent goes over interview notes with subject, interview notes are subject to Jencks Act).

(17) Giglio Information. Pursuant to Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972), the defendant requests all statements and/or promises, express or implied, made to any government witnesses, in exchange for their testimony in this case, and all other information which could arguably be used for the impeachment of any government witnesses.

(18) Agreements Between the Government and Witnesses. In this case, the defendant requests identification of any cooperating witnesses who have committed crimes, but were not charged, so that they may testify for the government in this case. The defendant also requests discovery regarding any express or implicit promise; understanding; offer of immunity; past, present, or future compensation; or any other kind of agreement or understanding, including any implicit understanding relating to criminal or civil income tax, forfeiture or fine liability between any prospective government witness and the government (federal, state and/or local). This request also includes any discussion with a potential witness about, or advice concerning, any contemplated prosecution, or any possible plea bargain, even if no bargain was made, or the advice not followed.

Pursuant to United States v. Sudikoff, 36 F.Supp.2d 1196 (C.D. Cal. 1999), the defense requests all statements made, either personally or through counsel, at any time, which relate to the witnesses' statements regarding this case, any promises -- implied or express -- regarding punishment/prosecution or detention of these witnesses, any agreement sought, bargained for or requested, on the part of the witness at any time.

(19) Informants and Cooperating Witnesses. To the extent that there was any informant, or any other tip leading to a TECS hit in this case, the defendant requests disclosure of the names and addresses of all informants or cooperating witnesses used, or to be used, in this case, and in particular, disclosure of any informant who was a percipient witness in this case or otherwise participated in the crime charged against Mr. Loma-Torres. The government must disclose the informant's identity and location, as well as the existence of any other percipient witness unknown or unknowable to the defense. Roviaro v. United States, 353 U.S. 53, 61-62 (1957). The government must disclose any information derived from informants which exculpates or tends to exculpate the defendant.

(20) Bias by Informants or Cooperating Witnesses. The defendant requests disclosure of any information indicating bias on the part of any informant or cooperating witness. Giglio v. United States. Such information would include what, if any, inducements, favors, payments or threats were made to the witness to secure cooperation with the authorities.

(21) Inspection and Copying of A-File. Mr. Loma-Torres requests that this Court order the government to make all A-Files relevant to Mr. Loma-Torres available for inspection and copying.

(22) Residual Request. Mr. Loma-Torres intends, by this discovery motion, to invoke his rights to discovery to the fullest extent possible under the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure and the Constitution and laws of the United States. Mr. Loma-Torres requests that the government provide his attorney with the above-requested material sufficiently in advance of trial to avoid unnecessary delay prior to cross-examination.

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE ADDITIONAL MOTIONS

Mr. Loma-Torres and defense counsel have received limited discovery in this case. Specifically, after viewing the A-file, Mr. Loma-Torres may file a motion attacking the validity of his alleged deportation. Additionally, as new information surfaces due to the government providing discovery in response to these motions, or an order of this Court, the defense may find it necessary to file further motions, or to supplement existing motions with additional facts. The denial of this request will result in a violation, at a minimum, of

Mr. Loma-Torres's Fifth and Sixth Amendment rights. Therefore, defense counsel requests the opportunity to file further motions based upon information gained from discovery.

VIII.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Mr. Loma-Torres respectfully requests that the Court grant the above motions.

Respectfully submitted,
